A BEASTIE BOYS HAUNT IN BALI WITH A CLEVER PERUVIAN CHEF

The party scene in Bali has moved from Kuta to Canggu – via Seminyak. But surprisingly, it's in the serious surf town of Uluwatu that the coolest beach club has just popped up. Ulu Cliffhouse is set over the Indian Ocean, with a huge infinity pool, access to the beach below and with it one of Bali's most sought-after waves. Naturally, there's an in-house surfboard shaper, but more exciting still is Peruvian chef Diego Muñoz in the kitchen. Formerly of Lima's Astrid & Gastón (33 in the World's 50 Best Restaurants list), he's serving small plates inspired by his new home: the shrimp ceviche is cured in chillies from local farms; pomegranates from his kitchen garden add sweetness to the guacamole. The Beastie Boys played at the club's launch and there's an on-site recording studio. So head here to find music fans sipping mango Daiquiris with Balinese rum and surfers sinking home-brewed kombucha. JADE MOYANO ulucliffhouse.com. About £30 for two
